Color Scheme Designer is an application that can help you create various color schemes and simple web page templates. This application comes in handy for all designers who want to view the color wheel and harmonies. The program sports a simplistic interface that allows users to perform several actions on the go. You can generate a pallet (hue-based), or choose from two monochromatic color schemes (based on the saturation and lightness). Color Scheme Designer allows users to adjust the level of tints, tones and shades, thanks to the built-in sliders. It is possible to select from a total of four harmony types (analogous, complements, split-complements, and triad). The program can also generate random color schemes. It features a color picker that can help you drag the floating window over a specific area of your desktop, and view what colors that section includes. The application is able to create HTML pages pretty easily. Moreover, it is possible to add the colors from the color wheel or harmonies to a favorite section. You can simply drag and drop them into the dedicated fields. It is possible to add fourteen colors to the list, and the program automatically saves your preferences when the app is closed. You can save the color schemes, and later import these projects whenever you need them. Exporting the data to a CSS file is particularly simple. Color Scheme Designer also allows users to edit the CSS file directly from the main window. To sum things up, Color Scheme Designer is a small but powerful tool that can help you generate different color schemes and harmonies pretty quickly. Color Scheme Designer Description: you can be granted the dubious honor of being named a game changer in a four-man race. For a number of reasons, what was once considered a fringe position is now very much the centre of the political universe. And that's because the progressive forces in Canada are no longer in alliance with the center. They've separated themselves. It's not clear how far to the right the NDP will go, but if they're not careful, they'll find themselves pitching in with the Conservatives. One of the paradoxes of this year's election campaign is that not a single party leader wants to be the next Liberal prime minister. And that means that nobody wants to be the next Conservative prime minister either. The truth is that most of Canada's political leaders are signalling that they are open to forming a coalition with the opposition parties and
